Buy one, get one free (BOGO) ____ 33. ____ a good deal for anyone ____ 34. ____ to spend money wisely. However, is it really that good? Do you really need that "free" one? BOGO is the kind of sales promotion which businesses love to use. It's very common, and it fools many people into spending more money than they first planned to. Here's ____ 35. ____.

Customers ____ 36. ____ the trick buy one item at the full price and get a second one "for free." At this point, some of you might ask why businesses don't just sell each item at half price. But for those who understand the game, the answer is quite clear. The secret ____ 37. ____ the profits that these stores expect to make. ____ 38. ____ this better, take a look at the example below: ____ 39. ____ larger profits, businesses also often cheat customers out of their money with BOGO deals. How? Well, they simply sell the first item at a price that is higher than the full price. That covers the cost of the "free" one. As you can see, "free" is not always a good deal for the people who are pulling out their wallets.

Most of the time, you just end up ____ 40. ____ more on something you don't need. So, next time you're out shopping, be sure to watch out for these sales tricks. Then, you'll be a smart shopper whose money is never wasted.

When we speak, we often use words and phrases like "um," "ah," "like," and "you know." They don't mean anything, but they help keep a conversation going. If you are preparing to speak to an audience, however, you should try to ____ 41. ____ these words from your speech.

There are two important reasons why you should do this. Firstly, when you are speaking ____ 42. ____, you usually want to express an important message. ____ 43. ____ your speech with empty words will make your message sound less powerful. Secondly, these words can be very ____ 44. _____. If your audience realizes you keep using such words, they will stop paying attention to your message. Instead, they will spend their time listening for the next "like" or "um" you will say. In order to break this habit, you can practice slowing down your speech. Our mouths often work faster than our minds. So we use words like "um" while our minds ____ 45. ____.

When you are speaking in front of everyone, take your time and try not to be nervous. Your speech will flow much better, and your audience will hear your message loud and clear.

四. 閱讀測驗 10 題 每題 2 分

Did you know that most bees don't live in a hive with thousands of other bees? That's right. Nine out of ten bees actually live alone. They don't make honey, and they rarely attack people (because they have no hive to protect!). As a result, they are no danger to pets or humans.

Bees also help pollinate important food plants. Without them, lots of our food would not grow. Sadly, these bees are disappearing. Like many of us, these bees like to have their own private little rooms. They love to live in long, thin holes, like the ones in bamboo sticks. Our clean, modern buildings and tidy gardens don't provide many places for them to live. But we can help! Making a special bee hotel is easy. You just need a few simple materials and basic tools. If you would like to build a bee hotel, come and see me at 4 Oak Road. I have everything you'll need. And I will show you how to build one! Thank you for helping our local bees!

46. What does the author suggest about building a “bee hotel”?
- (A) It is a costly but effective way to increase honey production.
(B) It requires a lot of experience and advanced tools to build.
(C) It is a simple way for people to provide homes for solitary bees.
(D) It must be placed in a hive to attract bees to use it.

47. What action does the author encourage readers to take, and how can they begin?

- (A) Learn about pollination by visiting a local farm.
(B) Visit 4 Oak Road to gather materials and guidance to build a bee hotel.
(C) Contact a professional to install a bee hotel at home.
(D) Attend a workshop about protecting bees in modern environments.

In recent years, more kids have become successful entrepreneurs, proving that creativity and determination have no age limit. Young minds often see the world differently, looking for unique problems and solutions that adults might not notice. These kids are not only making money but also making a difference.

One famous example is Moziah Bridges, who started his bow tie business, Mo’s Bows, at the age of nine. Frustrated by the lack of stylish bow ties for kids, Moziah began creating his own with the help of his grandmother. Today, his business is a multi-million-dollar company, and he has even been featured on Shark Tank.

Mikaila Ulmer is another young entrepreneur making waves. At just four years old, Mikaila was stung by bees, which led her to learn about their importance to the environment. She used her grandmother’s flaxseed lemonade recipe to create Me & the Bees Lemonade, sweetened with honey. Today, her company promotes bee conservation while selling her drinks nationwide.

These examples show that kids can turn their passions into thriving businesses. With support and determination, young entrepreneurs can change the world in creative ways.

entrepreneur 企業家 prove 證明 creativity 創造力 limit 極限 determination 決心 frustrated 感到挫折的 lack 缺乏 stung 被螫的 flaxseed 亞麻籽 conservation 保育 thriving 興盛的 focus 專注 benefit 益處

48. What does the article suggest about the creativity of kid entrepreneurs?

- (A) Kids often copy adult business ideas.
(B) Kids find unique problems and create smart solutions.
(C) Kids need a lot of help from adults to start businesses.
(D) Kids usually succeed only by selling simple products.

49. What lesson did Mikaila Ulmer learn from being stung by bees?

- (A) Bees are important for the environment and need protection.
(B) Bees are dangerous and should be avoided.
(C) Bees can be used to make money through honey products.
(D) Bees are essential for making sugar-free candy.

50. Based on the article, how are modern kid entrepreneurs different from traditional business owners?

- (A) They rely more on TV shows to market their products.
(B) They mainly sell products that are popular with children.
(C) They focus on environmental and social benefits in their businesses.
(D) They always work with adults to develop their ideas.
